Overall Forgiveness Index

Introduction & Overall Score

Total forgiveness is a worthy goal, yet few achieve forgiveness that is transformative for themselves and others. Choosing to be a forgiving person requires understanding, patience, strength of character, and intention, as well as relying on God's grace towards us. Self-assessment is only the beginning of the journey to robustness in virtues that lead to a life of maturity and love. "Forgivingness" is a state of mind and heart that remembers our own forgiveness from God through the work of Jesus Christ and allows that grace to flow to others.

Before you review your results below, it is helpful to remember that forgiveness is intended to lead us and others to a life of peace and reconciliation. While we are called to forgive, it is important to understand that forgetting the hurt from others and being completely reconciled to them through a friendly, trusted relationship may take much longer. So look at forgiveness as the doorway to potentially much richer relationships. As much as it depends on you, try to be a forgiving person who seeks peace. If you decide to pursue this, we are here to help you. Please read on and know that whether your results are stellar or discouraging, we all have room to grow towards being people of faith and forgiveness.

Below you'll find your scores on the four domains of forgiveness represented by the high-level overview we call The Forgiveness Index. We calculate your Forgiveness Index based on the four domains below, which include decisional, emotional, and trait forgiveness, and how closely your decisional and trait forgiveness align.

Each domain is discussed in greater detail throughout the report. We hope that this report will inspire or strengthen a lifelong habit of power and purpose towards others by offering forgiveness to them in ways that foster deeper intimacy, love, and joy in your relationships.

Your Overall Forgiveness Index Score (0-100%)

72%

High Overall Forgiveness Index (70–100%)

Your scores suggest that you are practicing forgiveness both in your choices and in your emotions. This means you are not only deciding to release others from their offenses but are also experiencing an inner freedom from bitterness or resentment. Your trait forgiveness shows this pattern is becoming a steady part of who you are. Alignment between your decisions and emotions indicates that head and heart are working together, creating a durable habit of forgiveness. Keep reinforcing this by walking closely with Jesus, reflecting on His forgiveness of you, and continuing to practice forgiveness in daily life.

Decisional Forgiveness Assessment Results

63%

Moderate Decisional Forgiveness (35–66%)

The Decisional Forgiveness Assessment measures your will and actions toward forgiveness… Your score suggests that you've begun loosening your grip on retaliation or avoidance, but forgiveness may still feel incomplete. At times, you may be able to act with restraint… This middle ground is actually a sign of healthy growth, revealing that God is at work in your heart to transform your intentions, even if they are not yet fully consistent. Be encouraged… Through prayer, reflection, and practice, your decisions can continue to line up more closely with Christ's call to forgive.

Emotional Forgiveness Assessment Results

56%

Moderate Emotional Forgiveness (35–66%)

The Emotional Forgiveness Assessment measures your emotional response… Your score suggests that you are experiencing a mixture of emotions. At times, you may feel freer and even able to wish the offender well, while at other times the sting of the hurt resurfaces. This is a natural part of the forgiveness journey… Keep bringing your heart and pain before Him, and over time, you will see your emotions come into greater harmony with the forgiveness you desire to live out.

Decisional & Emotional Alignment

94%

High Alignment (75–100%)

A high correlation means your choices and feelings are working together, which brings greater inner peace and stability. You are not only deciding to forgive but are also experiencing emotional release, allowing forgiveness to take deeper root. This unity of heart and action reflects the Spirit's transforming work in you.

Trait Forgiveness Assessment Results

68%

High Trait Forgiveness (67–100%)

Your score shows that you have a strong tendency to let go of hurt and extend grace in your relationships. Forgiveness becomes a deeper part of your character, enabling you to move forward without carrying bitterness or resentment. This reflects the work of God's Spirit in your life… While no one forgives perfectly, your score suggests that you are walking in the freedom of forgiveness.
